

With us for life

- 1) Autism will always be with us for the rest of our life.
- 2) The most important thing is to understand how autism affects us and that it affects each one of us differently, because its only through this understanding that our needs can be met.
- 3) A person with autism can only progress for the better if given the right understanding, the right encouragement and the right environment which all three of these mean empathy. Empathy is the key value that we need.
- 4) This type of help leads to a happier life where life for a person with autism has some value that means a lot to that individual.
- 5) So always remember that autism is something that will always be with us for the rest of our life and once understood how it effects us, we can then progress that leads us to a life of value.
